To Whom It May Concern:

I am writing this letter on behalf of Quinn Carrier. I had the pleasure of having Quinn in my math class. Quinn is an intelligent, responsible and respectful young man. He always came to class prepared and engaged in that day's lessons and activities. Quinn always liked to have a good time but also knew when it was time to get down to work. While not overly vocal, Quinn was a quiet leader in my classroom, often leading by example but not afraid to voice his opinion when needed. He was one of the more successful athletes in our school which gave him a certain level of status at our school, but Quinn, to his credit, never tried to parlay that attention into special treatment and rather just wanted to fit in and be a part of the school community. Quinn spoke about baseball many times and of his hope to play in college. With the focus and drive he demonstrated in my class, I'm sure his journey will lead to success.

Sincerely,

Eric Dimmery
